Kyle's Korner

Does it seem to you, as it does to me, that Christians, as a whole, have become ashamed of the gospel?

I've been pondering the words of Paul this week: "For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ, for it is the power of God to salvation for everyone who believes, for the Jew first and also for the Greek" (Romans 1:16, NKJV). Paul wasn't ashamed of the words of the gospel because he knew their power from a very personal standpoint. He knew that the gospel had saved him spiritually, and he knew its power to save others. As a matter of fact, the power of the gospel goes beyond barriers of race. Though the Jews were the first to receive it, the gospel was eventually proclaimed to all people of all nations. The gospel is able to save all who will obey God's Word.

I'm afraid that Christians, as a whole, have become afraid to speak about what they believe and why. If we are too ashamed of the gospel message to proclaim it to the lost, what will happen to the church? Unfortunately, I believe we are already seeing the effects of this shame.

Paul wasn't ashamed, and neither should we be. Knowing the gospel's power to save even sinners such as ourselves, we should be willing to tell others of its great power in hopes that they would turn to God before it is too late. We are reminded by Peter that God is unwilling that any should perish (2 Peter 3:9), and we should be of a similar mindset. If we fail to proclaim the message, who, then, will be saved? How many souls might be lost because of our inaction in presenting the good news? Are you ready to explain your reasons in judgment?
