

Kyle's Korner

1 Corinthians 13:11 (NKJV)

11 When I was a child, I spoke as a child, I understood as a child, I thought as a child; but when I became a man, I put away childish things.

There are many things I have noticed that were much different in childhood than in adulthood. Especially around the holidays... While many of the traditions are the same, I have a new perspective of them as an adult.

Many of these things still bring me joy, but in a different way. Snow, for instance, is still fun, but I don't always feel the need to go out and play in it. (Especially this week... the cold... Am I right?!) I still enjoy visiting family and friends, but not for the same reasons I enjoyed it in my childhood.

One of the biggest perspective changes between childhood and adulthood around the holidays is the gift giving we participate in. I remember, as a child, the things I wanted and hoped to receive, and my parents and grandparents did a good job of coordinating who would give me those things. More often than not, I got what I wanted, plus a little more. Some of the gifts I enjoyed more than others, but, overall, my parents taught me the importance of appreciating (and expressing it) whatever I was given.

Nowadays, I get more joy from finding gifts my family and friends will appreciate and giving them their gifts and seeing their reactions. As kids, we don't see the joy of being "Santa," but as adults, I think we understand it more. I know I do!

All of this is a reminder to me of the greatest gift and giver - God. He loved us, as we love our families. He gave us the greatest gift possible - the sacrifice of His Son. In it, He showed us what love and giving are truly about.
